Making a Difference Through My Career

Ever since I have started thinking about future careers I told myself that there are two necessary questions towards me approaching the right career. Those two questions are, am I making a real difference in my future career and am I making a benefit to other peoples' lives. Through these questions I realized that the right career path for me is the medical field. In many ways I can make an impact on our world and other people through this career.

Through this career I would be making an impact on the world due to the demand that the medical field has. Health care is an essential career that will always need the support of responsible and dedicated workers. This career is considered by many very difficult and contains numerous risks which is why there is a need for more workers as many don't fit the criteria. I would hope that the inclusion of my services would help minimize the staffing shortages of a medical profession in an important way. This field also gives me the opportunity to make the lives of others better. Whether I am saving lives in the emergency room or simply treating aches and pains in the wound center in the end I would be solving problems that would help others tremendously. Keeping others worries off their health would be my main goal as a health professional.

Caring for others has always been one of my biggest morals for family, friends, and any stranger in need. I feel the medical pathway will help me continue that moral into my day to day life. At the end of the day what will make me happy is making others lives much better.
